The Hispanic American Society, devoted to the study of contemporary Latin America, Spain, and Portugal, is affiliated with Stanford University's Institute of Hispanic American and Luso-Brazilian Studies. It endeavors to provide the usual advantages enjoyed by members of professional organizations. The organ of the society is the Hispanic American Report, which provides an indispensable analysis of developments in Latin America, Spain, and Portugal, and which is sent each month to members. It is hoped henceforth to distribute annually to members an index to the current volume.

Please be sure to put this address on all correspondence:

Bolivar House, Stanford University, Stanford, California

Propaganda publications of organizations and government departments are welcome and will be carefully studied, but the Report cannot be offered in exchange.

Individual subscription including membership in the Hispanic American Society is $7 per annum (regular member), $10 (sustaining member), and $25 (patron). Individual membership is made available at a low rate in order primarily to facilitate the circulation of the Report among teachers; it is hoped that those who can will subscribe in higher categories. It should be understood that these rates do not apply if an institutional check is sent in payment. Since the cost of everything goes up, and since we wish to save clerical labor, we believe it is mutually advantageous if members send in their subscriptions for several years in advance. Commercial and institutional subscriptions to the Hispanic American Report are $12 per annum, $25 (sustaining), and $100 (patron). Individual issues of the Report may be obtained for $1. Checks should be made payable to the Hispanic American Society, Stanford University. Individuals must send their checks with their application; institutions may if desired be billed. Rates for mailing the Report by air, as well as advertising rates, are provided on request. The earlier volumes of the Report may be obtained on microfilm at $3 a volume from University Microfilms, 313 N. First Street, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

INSTITUTE OF HISPANIC AMERICAN AND LUSO-BRAZILIAN STUDIES AT STANFORD UNIVERSITY

The program of Stanford University's Institute of Hispanic American and Luso-Brazilian Studies is an area or regional program in that it concerns itself with a definite area—Spain, Portugal, and Latin America—but this is a cultural rather than a geographical region. Like that old and well-established subject philosophy, the program synthesizes several disciplines. It may be compared with other inter-departmental subjects such as biochemistry and engineering mechanics.

The program originated in the language department: the study of a foreign area without a mastery of the language of that area is comparable to engineering without mathematics. Conversely, it should be stated clearly and emphatically that, in the contemporary world, to teach Spanish as it has been traditionally taught, namely in terms of literature, occasionally great, but usually second-rate, is comparable to confining the teaching of mathematics to algebra on the grounds that calculus is new-fangled and rather difficult. Mastery of a foreign language involves more than the ability to decipher a written text. One of the most valuable and indeed most difficult of modern techniques, the use of native informants, requires a good command of the spoken language. Authorities from Spain and Latin America regularly address in Spanish or Portuguese the seminar which prepares the Hispanic American Report and engage in discussion with members of the seminar. The Hispanic American Studies program strives to bridge the dangerous gap between the humanists and the social scientists.

Every program must have a focus, depending on the idiosyncrasies of the civilization studied and on the peculiar interests which have developed at any given institution. The predominant obsession of Latin America, Spain, and Portugal today is politics—not the abstract variety which flourishes in more metaphysical lands, but a peculiarly personalist brand, involving a day-to-day struggle in which revolution and unrest are often accompanied in a paradoxical way by economic and social growth. The study of the political, social, and economic development of the area is the theme of the Hispanic American Report, the monthly publication of the program. The training on the Report is the core of the advanced program in Hispanic American Studies; the minute analysis it provides is as fundamental as the continual use of a microscope by a biologist. Researchers are trained to write for internationally recognized publications. Those who complete satisfactorily at least two years' work on the Report receive a certificate.

Geography plays an important part in the program, since it is impossible to understand a civilization without knowing the geographical basis on which it rests. This is especially true of an area such as Latin America, which is so often described as having a "telluric" culture. Other disciplines such as economics, political science, and anthropology contribute to the symposium which constitutes Hispanic American Studies. While the advanced program stresses the contemporary scene, the history requirements in the undergraduate program provide a background for this study. The School of Education is keenly aware of the importance of the academic study of the realities of the contemporary world. Last but not least, the School of Mineral Sciences has several senior professors who have had long experience in Latin America, and, in view of the importance of mining in the political, social, and economic life of Latin America, our relations with that School have been close and cordial.

Those working at the Institute may use the collection of materials about contemporary Latin America, Spain, and Portugal which has been assembled for some years as a necessary concomitant of the monthly preparation of the Hispanic American Report. These materials are hard to collect, and the Stanford archives serve as a central depository.

A folder describing the Hispanic American Studies program and giving the requirements for the degrees of A.B., A.M., and Ph.D., may be obtained by writing to Bolivar House, Stanford University, Stanford, California. Since fellowship applications must be complete by February 8, applicants should obtain the necessary forms in the preceding calendar year.

The Institute carries on Stanford's long tradition of Luso-Brazilian studies initiated by the University's second president, John Casper Branner. The Institute offers an M.A. and a Ph.D. with a concentration in Luso-Brazilian studies, the stress being, as is true of all the Institute's work, on the analysis of the contemporary scene. Students who have completed elementary Portuguese may apply for an NDEA fellowship to do graduate work in Hispanic American Studies with a specialization in Luso-Brazilian Studies.

The Institute of Hispanic American and Luso-Brazilian Studies is located in Bolivar House, 532 Alvarado Row, Stanford. It provides excellent working arrangements for students in the Institute's program. On the ground floor are the administrative offices, the conference room, and the Luso-Brazilian Center, while on the second floor there are rooms devoted to Spain and to each of the major regions of Spanish America.

Colleges and high schools preparing students to enter the program may wish to acquire the set of tapes in which speakers from different parts of the Spanish-speaking world read Américo Castro's Iberoamérica. The text, which retails for $4.50 may be obtained either from the publisher (Holt) or from the Stanford Bookstore. The set of tapes covering the complete text may be obtained for $30 from Stanford Library, Attn. Mr. Fred J. Priddle, Stanford, California.

The Institute holds monthly radio round-table discussions of Latin American affairs over the following stations: KPFA (Berkeley, for Northern California), KPFK (Los Angeles), WBAI (New York), and WGBH (Boston). For time of broadcasts consult the programs of these stations.

FOREWORD

A journal like the Hispanic American Report, which is packed tight with information, is clearly much more useful if it has an index. Hitherto, we have relied on cumulative indexes. Such an index of Volumes I through VII was prepared by my good friends Joseph C. Shirley and H. Leslie Robinson; unfortunately, it is now out of print. A similar index of Volumes VIII through XII is now in preparation.

Henceforth, beginning with Volume XIII, we hope to publish an annual index. Each will follow slightly different criteria from its predecessor, since the techniques employed are always under review. To the uninformed outsider it might appear that an index is the result of a mechanical operation about which there can be no argument. This is far from the truth. An index presupposes a whole series of criteria which reflect certain intellectual preoccupations.

It would take too long to explain all the methods of listing followed in this index. Suffice it to say that it is divided into two parts. The first is of personal names, which are listed together, regardless of country. A few names which were accidentally omitted from this part appear in the addendum at the end of the index. The second part is organized by countries, which here are arranged alphabetically rather than geographically, as in the Hispanic American Report itself. This part contains everything except personal names. To those consulting this section, we should perhaps give the obvious advice that any given topic should suggest a number of headings and that, if it is not found under one, it may well be listed under another.

The Editor wishes to express his thanks to the devoted staff members of the Hispanic American Report who have made this index possible.

INSTITUTE OF HISPANIC AMERICAN AND LUSO-BRAZILIAN STUDIES AT STANFORD UNIVERSITY

The program of Stanford University's Institute of Hispanic American and Luso-Brazilian Studies is an area or regional program in that it concerns itself with a definite area—Spain, Portugal, and Latin America—but this is a cultural rather than a geographical region. Like that old and well-established subject philosophy, the program synthesizes several disciplines. It may be compared with other inter-departmental subjects such as biochemistry and engineering mechanics.

The program originated in the language department: the study of a foreign area without a mastery of the language of that area is comparable to engineering without mathematics. Conversely, it should be stated clearly and emphatically that, in the contemporary world, to teach Spanish as it has been traditionally taught, namely in terms of literature, occasionally great, but usually second-rate, is comparable to confining the teaching of mathematics to algebra on the grounds that calculus is new-fangled and rather difficult. Mastery of a foreign language involves more than the ability to decipher a written text. One of the most valuable and indeed most difficult of modern techniques, the use of native informants, requires a good command of the spoken language. Authorities from Spain and Latin America regularly address in Spanish or Portuguese the seminar which prepares the Hispanic American Report and engage in discussion with members of the seminar. The Hispanic American Studies program strives to bridge the dangerous gap between the humanists and the social scientists.

Every program must have a focus, depending on the idiosyncrasies of the civilization studied and on the peculiar interests which have developed at any given institution. The predominant obsession of Latin America, Spain, and Portugal today is politics—not the abstract variety which flourishes in more metaphysical lands, but a peculiarly personalist brand, involving a day-to-day struggle in which revolution and unrest are often accompanied in a paradoxical way by economic and social growth. The study of the political, social, and economic development of the area is the theme of the Hispanic American Report, the monthly publication of the program. The training on the Report is the core of the advanced program in Hispanic American Studies; the minute analysis it provides is as fundamental as the continual use of a microscope by a biologist. Researchers are trained to write for internationally recognized publications. Those who complete satisfactorily at least two years' work on the Report receive a certificate.

Geography plays an important part in the program, since it is impossible to understand a civilization without knowing the geographical basis on which it rests. This is especially true of an area such as Latin America, which is so often described as having a "telluric" culture. Other disciplines such as economics, political science, and anthropology contribute to the symposium which constitutes Hispanic American Studies. While the advanced program stresses the contemporary scene, the history requirements in the undergraduate program provide a background for this study. The School of Education is keenly aware of the importance of the academic study of the realities of the contemporary world. Last but not least, the School of Mineral Sciences has several senior professors who have had long experience in Latin America, and, in view of the importance of mining in the political, social, and economic life of Latin America, our relations with that School have been close and cordial.

Those working at the Institute may use the collection of materials about contemporary Latin America, Spain, and Portugal which has been assembled for some years as a necessary concomitant of the monthly preparation of the Hispanic American Report. These materials are hard to collect, and the Stanford archives serve as a central depository.

A folder describing the Hispanic American Studies program and giving the requirements for the degrees of A.B., A.M., and Ph.D., may be obtained by writing to Bolivar House, Stanford University, Stanford, California. Since fellowship applications must be complete by February 8, applicants should obtain the necessary forms in the preceding calendar year.

The Institute carries on Stanford's long tradition of Luso-Brazilian studies initiated by the University's second president, John Casper Branner. The Institute offers an M.A. and a Ph.D. with a concentration in Luso-Brazilian studies, the stress being, as is true of all the Institute's work, on the analysis of the contemporary scene. Students who have completed elementary Portuguese may apply for an NDEA fellowship to do graduate work in Hispanic American Studies with a specialization in Luso-Brazilian Studies.

The Institute of Hispanic American and Luso-Brazilian Studies is located in Bolivar House, 532 Alvarado Row, Stanford. It provides excellent working arrangements for students in the Institute's program. On the ground floor are the administrative offices, the conference room, and the Luso-Brazilian Center, while on the second floor there are rooms devoted to Spain and to each of the major regions of Spanish America.

Colleges and high schools preparing students to enter the program may wish to acquire the set of tapes in which speakers from different parts of the Spanish-speaking world read Américo Castro's Iberoamérica. The text, which retails for $4.50 may be obtained either from the publisher (Holt) or from the Stanford Bookstore. The set of tapes covering the complete text may be obtained for $30 from Stanford Library, Attn. Mr. Fred J. Priddle, Stanford, California.

The Institute holds monthly radio round-table discussions of Latin American affairs over the following stations: KPFA (Berkeley, for Northern California), KPFK (Los Angeles), WBAI (New York), and WGBH (Boston). For time of broadcasts consult the programs of these stations.
